The Petals, an Alternative Rock band from Pittsburgh, PA, are here with their latest release - Centurion. Spanning four distinct yet connected tracks, the EP showcases the band's evolving style, blending danceable synths, intimate vocals, and a mix of acoustic and electric rhythms. This brisk 12 minute installment to their catalog offers a new side of their creative process, trading previously somber tones for colorful new explorations saturated in modern textures. Centurion will be available to stream on all major platforms on 02/21/25

The project came together not long after returning from a short run of shows in August 2023. Harnessing the energy from playing live night after night in new and unfamiliar spaces, The Petals returned to Pittsburgh and began the recording process immediately before any details could vanish. The self-produced EP leans into sharp drum rhythms, hazy synths, and layered guitars to tell its story.

The first track, Roofwalker opens up the collection with a firework display of programmed synth elements underneath a heavily processed vocal performance, letting the listener know from the very start what they might expect for the next 10 minutes. As some of the more experimental decisions of Roofwalker retreat, Red Planet carries the highly digital spirit laid down by its predecessor and takes it to another level by incorporating a set of cavernous guitar hooks and integrating more of a traditional rock and roll approach into the shiny, synthetic soundscapes. Up next, the title track, Centurion, offers a reprieve with its memorable chorus and more relaxed spirit that contrasts the tense first half of the collection and manages to shine on its own. To conclude the set, Another Rover, is the culmination of all three of its trackmates. Offering a resolution that is consistent with the overall tone you've come to expect from this EP, it surprises when it's able and attempts to woo the listener with choruses made to remember.

This release is for anyone who appreciates hand-made, experimental, fun music. Perfect for nighttime driving, listening alone, at a show, or casually on a boom-box at a fire pit.
